Fifty years ago, Rachel Carson’s Silent Spring brought concerns about the environmental impact of pesticides to a broad public audience—spawning a grass-roots environmental movement that continues to this day. Join environmental leaders to explore the legacy of Silent Spring, and how science and advocacy interact in the face of our modern environmental challenges.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 27

4PM :: Sanders Theatre, 45 Quincy Street

A DISCUSSION FEATURING:

Frances Beinecke, President, Natural Resources Defense Council

Bill McKibben, Writer, activist, community organizer

Andrew Revkin, New York Times and Pace University

WITH HARVARD FACULTY:

William Clark, Harvard Kennedy School

Rebecca Henderson, Harvard Business School

Sheila Jasanoff, Harvard Kennedy School

James McCarthy, Faculty of Arts and Sciences

John Spengler, Harvard School of Public Health

MODERATED BY:

Daniel Schrag, Faculty of Arts and Sciences; School of Engineering & Applied Sciences