When I read in English . . .

. . . I get bogged down, and my mind wanders.

. . . I can’t tell which points are major ones and which are minor ones.

. . . I struggle to understand the argument.

. . . I fear that I miss things that native English speakers “get.”

Harvard Course in Reading and Study Strategies special session tailored to students for whom English is not their native language

January 14 - 18, 2013
Monday - Friday, 3 to 5 p.m. (5 class sessions)

For more information about this session or other sessions of the Harvard Course in Reading and Study Strategies, call 617-495-2581, or visit our website.